What makes good wine? Before the winemaker, before the fermentation, before the cellaring...

A lot of sun and a fair amount of rain.

And a good deal of resilience.

This is where building healthy soil in the vineyard nurtures a resilient foundation, even in times of drought from too much sun, and times of deluge from torrential rain.

Many studies show that organic soils are more tolerant of drought and better equipped to avoid erosion from run-off.

At Frey Vineyards, this resilience culminates in the magical harvest season when luscious grapes reach their peak of sun and rain!
